

What they do.

dwa is a specialist international technology media planning and buying agency. They also have a sister company, dwa business, who look at the financial and professional services sector.

One of our oldest clients.

Like many clients, our relationship with dwa dates back to to 2000 / 2001. We have provided many services for dwa and their clients, which range from website design, stationery, literature and brochure printing, DM pieces, online marketing campaigns, international print management and fulfillment through to brand management. There really is not a part of the creative process that we have not produced for dwa in some way. We even help them with their charity darts night each year! It is this relationship which we are very proud of. But please don't take our word for it, read below what they think of us.

DWA, Europe's No. 1 independent marketing and media agency for the technology sector, is proud to support the 2005 Computing Awards.

Congratulations to all the nights' winners. After all, as leader in our field we know what it means to be number one...

What they think of us.

"We have worked with the collective for a number of years now and always find them responsive to our demands. They are quick to turn things around, skilful and creative at design, cost effective and bloody good blokes as well."

Chris Bagnall, Client Services Director, DWA media
